Roseburg, May 11.

PROF. MILLER, in his speech on Thursday evening, said there was no need to fight the Mills bill, because it did not stand the ghost of a chance of success. A Pittsburg paper confirms this judgment by saying there is no need for Randall to array his small following against it, "as the bill will be sure to defeat itself." This means the democrats are not hearty in their professed desire for tariff revision, and this useful work will have to be delayed till the republicans take it in hand.
